0.2 Part 1: Written & SQL

0.2.1 Written

Please keep your answers brief.

1. Codd's Fourth Rule states that: The data base description is represented at the logical level in the same way as ordinary data, so that authorized users can apply the same relational language to its interrogation as they apply to the regular data. In two sentences please explain this rule and why it is so important.
2. Give 3 examples of what would be stored in a database catalog
3. What is the SQL database catalog called?

0.2.2 Solution 1. 2. & 3.

1. In the case of SQL, this metadata (data about the data in the database) should also be stored as tables, rows and columns following a similar structure as that of the regular data. Also, this metadata should obey all the characteristics of the databases including access privileges if needed. Moreover, the most important thing about this metadata is that it should be accessible by using the same query language that we use to access the database. Lastly, this is a very important rule because the metadata is really important to get the information about the complete database, and without this rule any database management system cannot be considered to be relational as the metadata should be stored in the same form as regular data and should be accessible by the same query language, keeping it uniform for the users to access any kind of data when working with the databases.

2. Some of the things that could be stored in the database catalog are as follows: a. Information about the relations (tables) such as names of the tables, information about different attributes in each relation/table, names and definitions of views, and integrity constraints associated with each of those tables. b. Authorization details: Users, roles and accounting information, including passwords and information like who can access what from the database. c. Physical file organization information: How the tables are stored, and what is the physical location of a table/relation.

3. The (SQL Server) SQL database catalog is also known as “System Catalog”. In MySQL, it’s also known as “Information Schema”.

4. What is the overall goal of indices in SQL?

5. What are the differences between a primary key and a unique index?

0.2.3 Solution 4. & 5.

4. An index on an attribute of a relation is a data structure that allows the database system to find some tuples in a relation efficiently, without scanning through all the tuples in a relation. Precisely, as many queries reference only a small portion of the records in the table, it is very inefficient to read every record in order to find a particular one; using the indices, we don’t need to go over all the records to find some matching tuples according to some attributes and we can get them really fast and in an optimized way. Moreover, in the case of primary keys in MySQL, an index is created for the primary and foreign keys in a table which helps the users access the records according to those keys really fast and efficiently.

5. a. Unique Index: It refers to an index where all the rows must be unique and there can be multiple unique indices per table or a relation. On the other hand, a primary key is always just one attribute of the table that must be unique. b. While, unique indices are not used to uniquely identify any row/s in a table and can have NULL values, on the other hand, primary key (or index) related to a table is used to uniquely identify any row/s in a table and thus, is not allowed to have any NULL values. Thus, the attributes or columns as a part of the primary key should be non-nullable. c. Primary key by itself doesn’t enable fast searching and optimized query run, although primary index does that job. In the case of unique index, as it’s an index, it enables the fast searching for finding a record or a set of records based on that attribute (unique, can be set of columns too). Reference: <https://stackoverflow.com/questions/707874/differences-between-index-primary-unique-fulltext-in-mysql>

6. Which SELECT statement is more efficient? Why?

- `SELECT playerId,birthState,nameLast,nameFirst FROM people where birthCountry = ‘USA’ and nameFirst = ‘John’ and playerId in (select playerId from collegeplaying where schoolID = ‘Fordham’);`

- `SELECT playerID,birthState,nameLast,nameFirst FROM people NATURAL JOIN collegeplaying where birthCountry = 'USA' and nameFirst = 'John' and schoolID = 'Fordham' group by playerID,birthState,nameLast,nameFirst;`

HINT: SQL uses a query optimizer so you can't just run both of these and see which one performs faster.

The `SELECT` statement with `NATURAL JOIN` would be less efficient as compared to the one with a sub-query. Primarily, this is because of how a subquery within a query is executed and how the natural join works. For the above query with a sub-query, the sub-query runs first over the table 'collegeplaying' to find all the playerIDs with a schoolID as "Fordham". Now, the data returned here is matched with the playerIDs from the table 'people' to give us the final result. Basically, in this case, we run over the data for 2 tables separately to find the result and considering the playerID column, if index is there for the attribute, it will all the more faster. On the other hand, for the `SELECT` statement with `NATURAL JOIN`, we first need to combine all the records of the 2 tables 'people' and 'collegeplaying' according to the playerID column and return the result after grouping by the columns which need to be a part of the result. If we don't take indexing and other optimizations into consideration, firstly, we need to join the 2 tables across some columns which would take up a lot of time, and then we need to iterate over the complete set of rows to find the matching rows from the joined table. This would take a lot more time! Assumption: I am taking into consideration that no indexing and optimization are applicable for both the queries above. In that case, the `NATURAL JOIN` should take more time in comparison to the the one with a sub-query! Thus, the `SELECT` statement with a natural join is less efficient in comparison to the one with a sub-query.

7. The create.sql file provided in the zip folder makes a schema and some tables that mimics metadata tables. Note there is the syntax "ON DELETE CASCADE" after the foreign key creation. What does this mean? Why do we want to specify `CASCADE` for the metadata tables? What does "ON DELETE RESTRICT" mean and when would we generally want to use this?

The "ON DELETE CASCADE" precisely means that if some particular record corresponding to the parent table is deleted, which contains the column that was referenced by another table with a foreign key constraint along with the `CASCADE` statement mentioned above, then the record corresponding to that key will also be deleted from the table in which that foreign key constraint has been added and so on and so forth. It goes recursively to all the tables where that constraint on that column has been added. For instance, in the csvcolumns table, a foreign key constraint has been added to the table name column in the csvcolumns table and references the table name column in the csvtables along with the "ON DELETE CASCADE". In this case, if an entry named 'table1' was added to the csvtables and the same was present in csvcolumns table too, if we delete the entry from the csvtables, the corresponding entry or entries in the csvcolumns having table name as 'table1' will also be deleted. As we also have a constraint added on that column in the 'csvindexes' table that references 'csvcolumns' table, the entry or entries in the csvindexes having table name as 'table1' will also be deleted. Also, if all the entries having table name 'table1' was deleted from the csvcolumns table, that wouldn't delete any entry from the csvtables column as the "ON DELETE CASCADE" was added to the csvcolumns table as it works in a top-down fashion. Thus, any entry or entries having table name as 'table1' will be deleted from the csvindexes table though as we had added the foreign key constraint with "ON DELETE CASCADE" in the csvindexes table too. If we do not specify cascading deletes, the default behavior of the database server prevents us from deleting data in a table if other tables reference it. So, that's what the "ON DELETE CASCADE" means. Coming to “ON DELETE RESTRICT” after the foreign key creation, that precisely means that we can’t delete a given parent row if a child row exists that references the value for that parent row. If the parent row has no referencing child rows, then we can delete that parent row. The child row here corresponds to the row in the table which has the foreign key constraint added on column/s in that table that references the columns from another table which is the one having the parent row in there. Furthermore, in this case, “ON DELETE RESTRICT” would thus be added to the table having the child rows referencing the column/s in the parent table. One more thing is that this is the normal behaviour for a foreign key even if you don’t add the “ON DELETE RESTRICT” with the foreign key constraint. So, it’s kind of a superfluous syntax and is not very much needed. If you want to explicitly state such a behaviour for a foreign key constraint, then we might add it but generally it’s not needed with database engines like MySQL.

0.2.4 SQL

[10]: %load_ext sql

[11]: %sql mysql+pymysql://root:dbuserdbuser@localhost/lahmansbaseballdb

1. Initials

- Find the initials, firstName, lastName, for every player from the people table.
- You need to return 10 rows.
- Sort by the nameFirst, nameLast ascending.
- Note: Even for those players with two last names, just return the first letter of their first last name

Answer:

[12]: %%sql
SELECT CONCAT(SUBSTRING(nameFirst, 1, 1), SUBSTRING(nameLast, 1, 1)) as ↳initials,
      nameFirst as firstName, nameLast as lastName from people
WHERE nameFirst is not NULL AND nameLast is not NULL
ORDER BY firstName, lastName ASC LIMIT 10;

0.3 Question 1a): Games Per Player using GROUP BY

- Find the yearID, lgID, games_per_player, for every year and league from the appearances table.
- Use a function to round down the games_per_player
- You need to return 10 rows.
- You must use `group by` in this query.

Answer:

[13]: %%sql
SELECT yearID, lgID, ROUND(SUM(G_all)/COUNT(playerID), 2) as games_per_player from appearances
GROUP BY yearID, lgID
LIMIT 10;

0.4 Part 2: CSVCatalog Tests

Once you have tested everything successfully in python, execute your tests one more time in jupyter notebook to show the expected output. You will need to restart your kernel after saving your python files so that jupyter will use the most recent version of your work.

You may need to drop tables before executing your tests one last time so you don't run into integrity errors

[7]: import unit_test_catalog as cat # This notebook should be in the same directory
↳ as your project

[8]: cat.create_table_test()

0.5 Part 3: CSVTable Tests

In the event that the data sent is too large, jupyter notebook will throw a warning and not print any output. This will happen when you try to retrieve an entire table. Don't worry about getting the output if this happens.

Additionally, the table formatting will get messed up if the columns makes the output too wide. In your tests make sure you project fields so that your outputs are legible.

As we can see above, there is a huge difference in the time taken by the dumb join and the smart join. While running 3 dumb join queries takes about 78 secs, running smart join queries (the same 3 of them), takes only about 2.79 secs which is a huge difference. Smart Join having the optimizations seems really important for a good DB Engine.
